

Twinkle, twinkle, daytime star.
How I wonder what you are!

Your light helps birds and roosters know
the time to wake and time to crow.

Things wouldn't bloom if not for you.
Plants need your rays, and we do, too!

When sunlight soaks into our skin,
you help us to make vitamins.

But sometimes you can be too strong!
That's why we must put sunscreen on.

We know that you're the reason why seasons change as months go by.

One long loop around your blaze:
a year is three hundred and sixty-five days.

Autumn's start will thrill us all,
as leaves turn red and start to fall.

When winter's here, our days grow short;
we bundle up for icy sports.
